A Dedicated Team of Attorneys for Every Client

Within our Civil Rights and Employment Litigation practice group, we assign a dedicated team of attorneys, including partners and associates, to each client. We do this to avoid the learning curve involved with assigning individual matters to attorneys who are not familiar with the client's particular needs and requirements. We play an active role in all stages of the formal and informal dispute resolution process, working closely with our clients' key stakeholders and responding to their inquiries immediately to ensure that the solutions we offer meet their financial, operational and risk-management standards.

In this same vein, each matter entrusted to our Civil Rights and Employment Litigation practice is handled by the same team of attorneys from inception through resolution. After our initial review and investigation, we provide a comprehensive assessment of the issues presented so that we can identify our clients' strengths and weaknesses and quickly work to resolve the case at that time if appropriate. We also provide an estimate of the legal fees and the potential liability exposure, if any; and, as the case moves forward, we continually reassess our client's leverage and our financial projections to ensure that our client is able to make informed decisions every step of the way. We conduct a cost-benefit analysis at each stage of the process as well in order to keep our clients' legal expenses as low as possible.

As part of our representation, we also offer monthly status reports that provide a brief account of each matter we are handling for a particular client. These reports are structured to meet each individual client's case identification requirements and any other needs they may have. When more in-depth analyses are required during the course of a matter (such as a pre-trial analysis or description of a settlement proposal) we provide comprehensive and detail-oriented reports that our clients can use to strategize throughout multiple levels of their organizations.
