Cullen and Dykman LLP is proud to announce the addition of six dynamic law students to its esteemed summer programs. This year's cohort, comprised of all women, will consist of three law students in the firm's Fellowship Programs, while the other three will join in the Summer Associate Program.

These students' unwavering commitment to their schools and communities has earned them accolades and exemplifies their deep-rooted dedication to making a positive impact. Already recognized as one of the "Best Law Firms for Female Attorneys" by Law360, as well as a top ten "Ceiling Smasher," Cullen and Dykman is committed to programs that foster a culture of respect, support, and professional advancement for all.

"We are thrilled to welcome this exceptional group of law students to our summer programs at Cullen and Dykman," expressed Chris Palmer, Managing Partner at Cullen and Dykman. "As a firm, we are committed to fostering an inclusive culture that celebrates diversity and promotes professional growth. We believe that our summer programs are an important part of that commitment, and we look forward to working with these bright and talented students over the coming months."

To showcase the outstanding achievements and unique journeys of each of these remarkable women, Cullen and Dykman will be featuring spotlights on them throughout the duration of the summer programs. These spotlights will highlight their contributions to their schools, communities, and the legal field at large.
