Cullen | Dykman

Professional Liability

Our Professional Liability team represents architects, engineers, insurance brokers, lawyers, real estate brokers and other professionals in all aspects of construction-related professional liability litigation. Our legal malpractice experience extends well beyond construction losses and includes underlying cases involving personal injury, commercial litigation, divorce and family, real estate, tax, probate, bankruptcy, products liability and criminal law. We also represent the interests of professional liability insurers, and many professional liability insurers have chosen our team to represent their professional insureds as select counsel. We handle cases in state and federal court in New York, New Jersey and throughout the United States, and we work closely with our clients to determine how to best protect their interests in litigation involving issues ranging from routine business practices to complex multi-million-dollar transactions.

Discrete Representation for Professional Liability Claims Involving High-Profile Projects

Our Professional Liability team has handled some of the largest construction design professional liability claims in New York. Our experience with large-exposure design claims at high-profile projects like the Lincoln Center and the Hearst Building has provided an unparalleled opportunity to work with the best professionals in the world. We have also litigated numerous other cases involving issues such as:

- Civil engineering and geotechnical design defect claims
- Improper boundary and property surveying claims
- Sheeting and shoring defects
- Specification defects
- Structural, architectural, electrical, mechanical and design contract disputes

We understand that professionals need to have these claims handled efficiently, discreetly and without disruption to their day-to-day practice. If you or your insured is facing a professional liability claim, we encourage you to get in touch.