February 13, 2020

Thomas B. Wassel, a partner in the firm's Commercial Litigation department, was interviewed by CBS New York on a recent change in Brookhaven's zoning laws. In 1988, Brookhaven changed its zoning laws in order to protect its wetlands and groundwater. Among the affected, Jennie Grosso and Theresa Licitra owned 2 plots of land that have been rendered nearly worthless. Tom Wassel stresses the need for property owners to be more involved with any legal changes happening within their community.
